NO. 5. THE PLANTER PLUS THE GROWER.

There's the Kona coffee, you know. It's got a flavor all its own. It's a Hawaiian product. And, if you get the idea of drinking it into the minds of the 5,000 tourists, just as the tourist has been taught to look for Costa Rica coffee when he visits Costa Rica, you'll not only be biting off a piece of regular merchant's profits, but you'll also be building up a home industry. You'll be making work for people right at home who'll buy things besides coffee. Won't you? And won't it be worth while? Won't it be a good investment? Something to thank those for who help you to get? Something to show you, in addition, that the tourist promotion work even reaches outside of the city, or cities, of the islands, and touches the planters and growers.

Yes, the planter and the grower. For, even the sugar man and the rice man can't altogether dodge this proposition. It takes a minimum of three tons of sugar a week to sweeten the coffee and tea and bake the cake and furnish the sweetmeats for five thousand travelers. And that's 156 tons a year. It doesn't make much of a hole in the half million tons of island sugar output; but at an average of eighty dollars a ton it runs pretty close to $12,500 a year; while at half that much, net, to the grower, it's over $6,000. Out of which the grower'd gladly spare a pretty healthy percentage to the Promotion Committee, wouldn't he; especially when the sugar grower, as a rule, is a pretty sizable factor in almost every other phase of island life.

Of course, the rice man doesn't get the return as heavily as the sugar man, because the tourist, unless he has already lived in warm climates, hasn't fastened himself to the rice habit. But 950 pounds of rice a week isn't altogether to be coughed at, is it, Mr. Rice Grower, or Dealer? Nearly 50,000 pounds a year. That's what it takes to feed an average bunch of 5,000 persons such as tourist-getting work will bring to Hawaii. Multiply that 50,000 pounds, Mr. Grower, or Mr. Dealer, by what you know to be your average net price, and you'll be all ready with your end of the subscription.
